

YOUR EMPLOYEE DATA DESERVES BETTER

Employees are your most important asset. They are one of the pillars that help your business innovate and grow. And you need to be agile in meeting both their needs and those of the business.

So why are you neglecting your HR data?

Three Signs Your HR Data is Being Neglected

- 1 Limited insight when making strategic staffing decisions
A typical HR department has more than 400 data elements about each employee, most of which are stored across multiple systems and in various schemas, making it difficult to get a clear, accurate view of your employees in real-time.
- 2 Failing to achieve full governance, auditability, traceability, and control over data
We're experiencing a worldwide shift to tighter regulation of how organizations manage and protect the personal data they gather. Siloed controls and inflexible technologies can't keep up with changing requirements to store, manage, search, and report accurate data within tight deadlines.
- 3 Struggling to innovate and retain talent
Your siloed systems make it hard to meet business needs and derive value from data, quickly and easily. For example, do your current systems allow you to highlight new opportunities within the organization that are well-matched to a specific employee's capabilities, encouraging them to stay and grow, vs leaving?

If this is your reality, you need MarkLogic® – the world's best data platform for simplifying data integration.

“As a result of our success using MarkLogic in a short timeframe, questions for the COE went from ‘why are we using MarkLogic?’ to ‘how can I use MarkLogic for my project?’”
